GIVE SCHOOLS THE RESOURCES THEY NEED TO KEEP KIDS HEALTHY

There are an estimated 6.6 billion square feet of indoor public school space and more than 1 million acres of public school land in the U.S. Yet, too many schools are locking their doors and closing their gates during non-school hours, inhibiting the community from using these resources to stay active.

When communities incentivize schools to enter into shared use agreements, they give schools the keys they need to unlock the doors™ and help children and families stay healthy. With incentives that support shared use agreements, everybody wins.